Description

Item Specifics

Origin : Iron Fall Rocks

Type: Silicated Iron

Hi! You are looking at seven Lynx Wash IIE Iron Meteorites, (ungrouped silicated). I found this Fall by the directions of an old miner friend of mine who witnessed it. In the Fall area are numerous fossilized coral rocks, and many of the fall-rocks have coral fused to them. Fused coral, similar in composition to the moon rocks and the 60 plus elements contained in these fall-rocks is the convincing evidence that they are meteorites. All buyers will be provided with copies of the three lab analysis and also a Free Ore Guide. Fire assays performed on the Fall-Rocks did not detect any gold, silver nor any of the platinum group elements. There are five pictures of polished slabs attached, the first four are Lynx Wash IIE Irons and the fifth is the Miles IIE Iron Meteorite (ungrouped silicated). Notice how similar they are. I enjoy having the young female lynx coming by to share a snack of tuna or sardines with crackers once or twice a week. I had numerous questions and comments regarding the lynx. She showed up hungry and thirsty last November at my trailer-camp near the fall-area. I fed her kitty-chow on a daily basis for three weeks. Now she does quite well on her own, the jack-rabbit population declined some since. I intend to keep her wild. Pictures of the lynx were taken December 21, 2008. Thanks for looking
